FIFTH SUNDAY OF LENT
TODAY'S FOCUS: Circling for the Kill

In a scene out of a nature show-only with humans, not animals-the crowd today circles the woman, ready to strike and kill to feed their self-righteousness. Jesus sends their pompous hearts away empty.

I drove past an intersection where a group of crows were picking at a carcass on the road. It reminded me of the scribes and Pharisees, hovering around the woman caught in adultery. She was dead meat to them.

Two thousand years later, there are people who are still dismissed as dead meat. Why is there hardness of heart in cultures, in families, in governments, and in places of employment? What can we do to help the unseen be seen, to foster justice?

Isaiah 43: 16-21

Psalms 126:3

Philippians 3: 8-14

John 8: 1-11

Lord, you know each of our stories. You know our whole story. Help us to see that each person we meet is your unique "one". A baby born in a refugee camp in Syria is precious in your eyes. A starving girl in South Sudan is "one" to you. A heroin addict living in a doorway in downtown Detroit is irreplaceable in your vision. You call us to become like you; we are never done learning to see as you see. Show us how to be "one" who can help.
